MEMORANDUM FOR THE DEPUTY DIRECTOR, CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

Subject: Satellite and Missile Surveillance Study ☐

25X1

25X1 1. ☐ On 16 October 1970, the Joint Chiefs of Staff (JCS) directed the Director of the Joint Continental Defense Systems Integration Planning Staff (JSIPS) to undertake a study to develop a plan for acquiring satellite and missile surveillance systems for the 1974-1981 time period which would meet their validated satellite and missile surveillance objectives. Attached is a copy of the Terms of Reference of the study.

25X1 2. ☐ This staff has since obtained special clearances for certain of its members who have been briefed by several agencies, including the Central Intelligence Agency. These briefings have led to the conclusion that the subject study should be conducted in two parts. The first would include only the present and programmed armed forces surveillance systems. The second would include national systems.

25X1 3. ☐ The second study would address such questions as how can the national systems contribute to meeting these JCS objectives? Does the technology involved in these systems have application in meeting these JCS objectives? What communications and data processing facilities would be needed to permit the systems to contribute to these objectives?

25X1 4. ☐ The creation of a formal steering group consisting of representatives from CIA, SAFSS, NSA, and DIA to guide the

SATELLITE AND MISSILE SURVEILLANCE SYSTEMS STUDY
(FY 74-81)

25X1 I. PURPOSE. The purpose of this document is to outline objectives and procedures for the conduct of a comprehensive study of specific satellite and missile surveillance system mixes worldwide for the fiscal years 1974-1981 time period.

25X1 II. OBJECTIVES. A study of specific satellite and missile surveillance systems to satisfy requirements for all users in the mid-range time period (FY 1974-1981) is required. For the purposes of this study Satellite and Missile Surveillance is defined as the systematic observation of aerospace for the purpose of determining the presence (detecting), determining the movement (tracking), and characterizing objects, events, and phenomena associated with launched satellites or missiles, friendly and enemy. This study, in developing a plan for acquiring required capabilities worldwide, should consider and exploit other related study efforts to the maximum extent feasible. The study should be oriented toward maximum utility and contribution to the Planning, Programming and Budgeting System and the FY 1973 Joint Strategic Planning System cycle. It should focus on those capabilities which might be attained within a military budget of varying constraints. The study should evaluate the relative importance of the requirements of the various users, and include recommendations relative to the development, survivability, acquisition, modification, retention, integration, and phaseout of specific systems within various alternative system mixes.

25X1 III. PROCEDURES. Subject study will be conducted by the Director, Joint Continental Defense Systems Integration Planning Staff (JSIPS), and is to be submitted to the Director, Joint Staff, by 1 October 1971. In conducting the study, the Director, JSIPS should consider information from previous or ongoing studies by JSIPS or other agencies, to include:
